"THAT TIRED FEELING."

Mr. Emmeluth Orders the Salvation Army to Move.

Mr. J. Emmeluth, plumber, tin-smith and member of the P. G. Councils, ordered the salvation army men who hold services at the noon hour daily, away from the corner of Nuuanu and Queen streets yesterday. Mr. Emmeluth told Sam Kaloa, the leader, that they were making too much noise, and that it gave him that "tired feeling." He also told the army to move away from the vicinity. Kaloa refused to move for Mr. Emmeluth, on the ground that it was not the councilman's property.

After the services, Sam Kaloa, who is a reformed pugilist, in conversation with his friends stated that he was sorely tempted to discard his priest's coat, and sail into Mr. Emmeluth with his dukes. He said he hadn't quite forgotten the manly art.

A number of people were on hand at noon to-day to see whether Mr. Emmeluth would repeat his performance of yesterday, but they waited in vain.

MONEY IN HIS MIND.

Agreeable Hallucination of a Wandering Man From China.

A Chinaman named Ah Wa was seen prowling around the city front yesterday evening by several people. He was asked by an officer what he was doing there, when he answered that he was taking a "look see." The cop invited him to "look see" the inside of the Police Station. At the station he was questioned as to where he came from and what he was doing on the wharf. Ah Wa stated he came from China two weeks ago on the steamer Kinan, and that he had sixty $10 gold pieces up at his house. He further said he had ninety-five million dollars stored away at Hanakua. These answers led the police to believe that he was insane. He was therefore detained for examination. On being examined by Dr. McWayne to-day, Ah Wa was declared insane and committed to the Asylum.

Didn't Know It Was Loaded.

Captain Juen and Detective Toma were talking over a pistol belonging to the latter yesterday afternoon, when Juen pointed the weapon at the wall in close proximity to Toma's head. Somehow the pistol went off, and the bullet buried itself in the woodwork, passing within an inch of Toma's ear. Juen explained afterwards that he thought the thing wasn't loaded. It was a close call, and Toma hasn't got over it yet. Fifteen minutes after the occurrence the detective, pale as a ghost, asked to be released for the night, and went home.

The boy was picked up and taken to Dr. Wood's office for treatment. The doctor set the arm and to-day the lad is doing as well as might be expected.
